Any remaining money is applied to reduce the cost of goods and shared as part of the Gross Profit in accordance with the Store Agreement.*

(A) in Clause 1.1(e), which stated:

“The Disclosure Document contains some of the information you need in order to make an informed decision about whether to enter into a Franchise Agreement.

Entering into a Franchise Agreement is a serious undertaking. Franchising is a business and, like any business, the franchise (or franchisor) could fail during the franchise term. This could have consequences for the franchisee.

A franchise agreement is legally binding on you if you sign it.

You are entitled to a waiting period of 14 days before you enter into this agreement.

If this is a new franchise agreement (not a renewal, extension, extension of the scope or transfer of an agreement), you will be entitled to a 7 day “cooling off” period after signing the agreement, during which you may terminate the agreement.

If you decide to terminate the agreement during the cooling off period, the Franchisor, must, within 14 days return all payments (whether of money or of other valuable consideration) made by you to the Franchisor under the agreement (Store Agreement).

However, the Franchisor may deduct from this amount the Franchisor's reasonable expenses, if the expenses or their method of calculation have been set out in the agreement.

Take your time, read all the documents carefully, talk to other Franchisees and assess your financial resources and capabilities to deal with the requirements of the franchise business.

You should make your own enquiries about the franchise and about the business of the Franchise.

You should get independent legal, accounting and business advice before signing the Franchise Agreement.

It is prudent to prepare a business plan and projections for profit and cashflow.

You should also consider educational courses particularly if you have not operated a business before.”

(B) in Clause 12.1(h), which stated:

“In the 2011-2012 financial year the merchandise suppliers to the franchise network contributed $13,196,333 to the fund. The Franchisor contributed in the same year, a further $3,714,387 to the fund. The fund was used in the entirety during that financial year for the payment of the costs of advertising and point of sale marketing material used in the 7-Eleven Stores.”

(C) in Clause 12.1(j), which stated:

“The Franchisor agrees, to spend the proceeds of the fund on the costs of the production and supply of point of sale promotional, advertising, marketing and other material, including all costs associated with such production and supply, promoting its System within and across its network some of which will directly relate to the Franchisee’s business and some of which will relate to the franchise network generally.”

(D) in Clause 13.6A, which stated, among other things:

In the conduct of the franchise business (as with the operation of any business) the Franchisee will be required to make payments of a recurring nature to persons other than the Franchisor or an associate of the Franchisor including payments for the purchase of stock and in respect of staffing and other operational expenses.... The extent to which such payments will need to be made will vary from one franchisee business to another and will be directly affected or influenced by the size and turnover of each Store and the business management practices adopted by the Franchisee.

Particulars of these type of payments on an annualised basis which are in the knowledge of, or are reasonably foreseeable by the Franchisor (but which do not necessarily represent the full extent of payments which might be made in any particular case) and the amounts or range which may apply are set out in the below table:

(i) admits that they included the statement referred to at sub-paragraph 44(a) of the FASOC;

- (ii) admits that they included the statement: “The Supplier collects and administers marketing funds sourced from monies paid to it by suppliers of goods or services to the 7 -Eleven stores franchised network (which includes fuel re-selling businesses). The value of such payments is mostly based on the volume of purchases of goods by Franchisees and Retailers from the vendors for on-sale by them from the 7-Eleven Stores as part of their Franchise or fuel re-selling businesses in accordance with the supply terms the Supplier negotiates with those vendors in relation to their supply of goods and services to its franchise network. The Supplier accounts for the money it so collects and expends that money initially on the production and supply of point of sale, advertising and promotional material based on its marketing spend for the appropriate financial year. Any remaining money is applied to reduce the cost of goods and shared as part of the Gross Profit in accordance with the Fuel Re-Selling Agreement. Where the cost of the marketing and promotional material exceeds in any year the amount collected by the Supplier in the fund, the Supplier contributes that additional amount.” [Clause 9.1(j)];

- Entering into a fuel re-selling agreement is a serious undertaking.*
- You are entitled to a waiting period of 14 days before you enter into the agreement.*
- If the agreement is a new fuel re-selling agreement (not a renewal, extension or transfer), you will be entitled to a 7 day "cooling off"* period after signing the agreement, during which you may terminate the agreement without cost.

Take your time, read all the documents carefully, talk to other fuel re-selling businesses and assess your financial resources and capabilities to deal with the requirements of the fuel re-selling business.

You should make your own enquiries about the agreement and about the business of the agreement.

You should get independent legal, accounting and business advice before signing the fuel re-selling agreement. You should also seek advice on the Federal, State or Territory and local laws that apply to it.

It is often prudent to prepare a business plan and projections for profit and cashflow.

You should also consider educational courses particularly if you have not operated a business before.”

“The Supplier agrees to spend the proceeds of the fund on the costs of the production and supply of point of sale, advertising and marketing material and other material, including all costs associated with such production and supply, promoting its System within and across its network some of which will directly relate to the Retailer's business and some of which will relate to the Supplier's network generally”;

(b) the Point of sale in-store marketing, advertising and promotional expenditure of $18,334,145."
